Singapore companies face tougher scrutiny and higher penalties for anti-competitive behaviour, in today's global corporate network. The changing business and regulatory environment makes it even more critical for directors to stay up to date on compliance issues. Competition issues are an area that has not caught the attention of many boards to date. It is an area that warrants attention particularly since there are criminal consequences (in some countries), or the risk of potential loss of directorship where there is non-compliance. Non-compliance can also mean a delayed implementation of a transaction, and consequential economic loss.

This session highlights the critical elements of what constitutes a competition concern, with the aim of allowing directors and senior management to easily spot the concern and delegate the review to an appropriate team.

Course Objectives

1. Understand what Antitrust and Competition is about and putting a business perspective over the issue.
2. Highlight directors' legal and regulatory duties and responsibilities.
3. Discuss the practical challenges of compliance .
4. Provide guidance on issue spotting.
5. Assess the cost of violations and breaches.
